The Salt Lake theater on Monday had its forty-ninth annual opening. Next year it will celebrate its golden anniversary. And if its first opening in 1862 was auspicious, that of Monday was equally so. It was fitting that it was so. And those who were present at matinee and at night saw a finished production. Big audiences were present on both occasions—not only big audiences, but capacity ones. And they came away from the play having been amused, having been enlightened, having seen on old friend, an accomplished actress, a gifted woman. And they were glad that they had been present.

Then, too, they witnessed the production of a play that has not yet been seen in the east, and the audiences were critical. Their judgment was asked as to the merits of a play. The verdict was not only good, not only better, but best.

Will respect it. And when Miss Crosman will go wild over the play. Miss Crosman has made an innovation. She tried one upon the people of the "wild and woolly west," a play which she knew as a great play. She wanted the opinion of real judges. She knew that she hald the familiest of comedies and she desired that the people who know what real comedy is to pass judgment first. Hence, with lier splendid company, she made the long jump from New York to the coast. She presented the problem. At the Colonial theater on Monday evening Margaret Illington was given a magnificent reception. Never since that playhouse opened has there been gathered there as representative an audience as the one of Monday evening. It was a demonstrative audience and gave this the one of Monday evening. It was a demonstrative audience and gave this the one of Monday evening. It was a demonstrative audience and gave this the one of Monday evening. It was a demonstrative audience and gave this the charming actress a great ovation. In turn they witnessed a mont heautiful production of a great play, "Until Eternity," (Jusqu a Eternite) a play adapted by and under the personal stage direction of Edward Elsner and it gives Miss Illington opportunity for emotional acting. It has been two years since Miss Illington was seen here, when playeers witnessed her splendid work in "The Thief." Shortly afterward she left the since, her first appearance in this new play. "Until Eternity," being at Tacoma a week ago on Thursday.

It is a play in which the brilliant actress is seen at her best. There are several climaxes, and in the last act her wonderful work is seen. Her absence from the stage for two years has lost her none of the qualities which placed her in the front ranks of her profession. "Until Eternity" has created more of a sensation than did "The Thief." The play itself is full of intense heart interest.

Miss Illington has not yet had a New York or an eastern audience pass indgment upon the play. Like Miss Crosman, who is at the Salt Lake Theater, she preferred to try it out in the west, and these western people pronounce "Until Eternity" a great play, a verdict which is certain to be approved when the play is presented here for a long while has had such sorgeous stage set-

Engene Forme is portrayed by Walter Edwards in a masterly manner, his acting is done with an case and grace that characterizes only the true artist. Equally well done is Leon Formac, in the hands of Edward Elsner, who is called upon more frequently for work of a vital nature to the play, than is Mr. Edwards. John Guthrie, a physician, is a minor character, though it could not be taken care of more ably than is done by Stanley De Wolfe. Matinee daily.

Splendid audiences greeted the Ingersoll Stock company Monday at both the afternoon and the evening performances, at the Garrick, and the excellent work done by the company on its opening night was surpassed if it were possible by that of yesterday. The new and attractive costumes worn by the women in the cast, the artistic setting of the scenes and the bright freshness of the whole caused much favorable comment. Monday's special Labor day matines at the Daniels packed that house in the afternoon with one of the largest audi-ences of the season and the Curtis com-pany, in its new offering, "The Lobster Girl," scored a big hit. There is more new comedy in this week's show at the Daniels than the Curtis people have of-fered in any of their shows.
